IN SEARCH OF OLD FRIENDS.

Letter From a Former Citizen of Washington, Whe Has Not Kept Pace With the News.

An interesting letter was received here the other day from Luther Chamberlain, a prosperous mechanic at Morristown, Hamblen County, East Tennessee. The writer may be remembered by old citizens as a popular young builder in this city, who left Washington more than thirty years ago, and has evidently heard little or nothing of Washingtou and Washington people since his departure.

The letter was addressed to the "President of the Northern Liberty Engine Company," an organization which went out of existence twenty years ago, and after some delay was delivered to Chief Cronin, who remembers the writer as a volunteer fireman. The letter asks particularly for information concerning John Williams and his family, with whom Chamberlain lived when he was here. Williams was a shoomaker, and the father of several children, John Williams, Lydia Russell, Georgiana Fertney and others, of whom the writer is anxious to learn.

The letter also inquires about a number of persons, including Thomas B. Entwisle, now Inspector of Buildings, but once a fellow-workman of the writer; Chief Cronin, who once ran side by side with Chamberlain to fires, and Robert Allen, James Allen, Ambler Minatree and several others, all of whom are dead.

When the writer left Washington its population was but 50,000, and he is manifestly unable to comprehend its vast growth. He carnestly recommends that steps be taken to fill up the old canal, which has already been obliterated, but which he fancies still lends its malarious lindences to the Island, and he urges many things long ago accomplished.

The letter closes with a cordial tribute and greeting to the strong men who formed the Northern Liberty Engine Company, and whom the writer supposes still hold together, but are, in reality, far scattered and few of them alive.

THEIR FRIENDS REJOICE

OVER THE VERDICT OF THE JURY

Vindicating the Defendants in the Star-Route Cases—An Enthusiastic Demonstration—Speeches of Colo-uel Ingersoll and Judge Carpenter -Interview With Judge Wilson-What Foreman Crane Says-Con-gratulatory Dispatches.

The announcement in yesterday's CRITIC that there would be a reception at Colonel Ingersoll's house last evening drew a large crowd to his residence. The sidewalk in front of the Colonel's residence was lined with as good-natured, but

As Enthustastic, an Audience as ever was got together. Fully one-third of the audience (which at 9 o'clock num-bered several thousand) was composed of ladies, who, by their prosence, showed in what esteem the defendants in the late trial what esteem the defendants in the late trial are held.

While the crowd on the outside, as stated above, numbered in the thousands, the large parlors of the house were also filled with ladies and gentlemen, among whom were Hon. Horace F. Page, of California; Hallet Kilbourn, General Joseph McKibbon, Major A. C. Richards, John F. Olmstead, Hon. George C. Gorham, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Helm, besides many other prominent business and professional men of the city, and all the defendants except Senator Dorsey. Mrs. Dorsey, Mrs. Ingersoli, Mrs. Miner, and Mrs. Bell, the sister of General Brady's wife, were present, and aided in making every one feel at home.

"My friends," said he, "I don't want to make a speech. All of you come in and see me."

The crowd demanded a speech.

"Well," said the Colonel, "If you must have it, I will say that to-day has proven we have twelve honest men in this District of Columbia. [Cheers.]

Why the Verdict Was Correct.

"The variety research for two seems."

Why the Verdict Was Correct.

"The verdict was correct for two reasons. First, because the jurors were honest, courageous men; second, because the defendants were innocent. That verdict will be of incalculable benefit to the District, and I will tell you why. It means

The End of the Spy. Detective and Informer System Here.

"The Department of Justice must now rely on the evidence of bonest men. It is glory enough for us to-night that we are not to be under a system of espionage that prevails in nearly every despotic country of the world. We want it so that every case can be tried on its merits. We want juries to find their verdicts on facts and evidence. We want every clerk in every department to know that it is his right to decide honestly, and without fear or favor—that he

"We want to teach administrations that they cannot terrorize juries in this country. We want to teach Presidents that they cannot force jurors to decide against their honest convictions. We have done something of this sort. We have showed the people that there is justice in this District. The verdict is a triumph for the whole American people. It is the end of the spy and informing system. It is not my victory, but the triumph of justice. [Cheers.] Now come in boys and see me."

The crowd did not care to come in, however. There was no room for it, notwith-standing that the punch-bowls were being constantly replenished.

Judge Wilson was next invited to orate. He did not say much, but what he did was to the point. He repeated Ingersoll's invitation for the crowd to come in.

Mrs. Rickers, the lady lawyer, who has taken deep interest in the cause of the defendants, said, "Let me tell you, gentlemen, that Merick's speech did more to convince the jury than anything else. I think he ought to buy himself another bouquet."

This saily was loudly cheered.

This sally was loudly cheered.

This saily was loudly cheered.

Judge Carpenter
received a hearty invitation to say a few words. He denounced the attempt of the Government to trample upon the rights of the defendants. Its efforts in regard to this trial was one of the most flagrant outrages of the century. Rerdell, he said, would suffer for his deeds. He would delight.

"Give Brewster hell," shouted an ex-Carpetter's reply came pat. "Somebody," he said, "wants me to give Brevster hell. Gentlemen, I have too much reverence to anticipate the certain judgment of Almighty

God."

Every allusion made by the speakers to the course pursued by the Department of Justice toward the defendants in the late trial was applauded to the echo.

A venerable-looking old gentleman, who stood with his wife near Colonel Ingersell's steps, said in in a loud tone: "Justice and right has at last triumphed in the face of opposing influences of the National Government. The filthy Department of Justice is now in disgrace."

disgrace."

Colonel Ingersoli's fine physiquo moved mpidly among the assembled throng, and with hearty handshakes and pleasing with hearty nanosnakes and pleasing smiles he greeted every new comer. An old gentleman, with a reverential face and snow-white locks and beard, said to the Colonel: "This is a triumph of right and truth."

and hounded."

One of the Twelve.

Certainly the most marked feature of the evening was the appearance of Reese Evans, one of the larors. Reese was standing in front of the house with the assembled thousands listening attentively to Colonel Ingersoll's speech, when Mrs. Dorsey spied him from her position on the front porch. Rushing up to him she said in her radiantly happy way: "This is one of the honest and brave twelve. Come in! Come in!" and suiting her actions to her words, she locked arms with the juror and accompanied him into the crowded parlors, where Mrs. Peek acted as chaperone No. 2 and locked his other arm. Reese and his fair escorts were soon surrounded by the many ladies present and received a hearty ovation. The gentlemen also shook his hand, and as Colonel Ingersoll gave him a hearty grasp he said, "Reese, you are a brave man."

An Interview With Col. Ingersoll.]
In an interview with a Carrie reporter yesterday evening Colonel Ingersoll said:
"For about two years the Government has put forth every effort to convict these defendants. The same result ought to have been reached in the other trial, and would have been had it not been for the illegal interference of the Government. There never was the slightest evidence of any conspiracy, and I always felt sure that the defendants would be acquitted, provided we got a jury of twelve men who were not only honest, but courageous man, who were not afraid of the Government, and who cared Continued on Third Page.

THE HILL INVESTIGATION.

Mr. Hill Requested to Produce More Papers—Mr. Stinemets Testifies Further.

The Hill Investigating Committee re-sumed its sessions in Assistant Secretary New's office at II o'clock this forenoon, the interested parties and their counsel being present.

interested parties and their counsel being present.

Mr. Coleman, counsel for Mr. Murch, stated that he had some time ago requested Mr. Hill to produce all the papers bearing upon the extra work performed by Bartlett & Robinson upon the New York postoffice building, but up to this time the desired documents had not been received.

Mr. Thomas, counsel for Hill, replied that the prosecutors should not expect to be allowed to "slash around" among the Architect's papers in the hopes of finding something crooked, but should ask for specific papers, and not monotains of documents.

Mr. Coleman replied that Hr. Hill was not being tried on an indictment, but was simply being investigated by a committee composed of his fellow-officers, and he should gladly open the door and let the light of day in by furnishing all papers requested.

Chairman New, without deciding the point, said, "Let the investigation proceed," and Mr. Stinemetz, the expert, took the stand and proceeded to read and explain further computations of stone furnished for the Philadelphia Custom-House.

The committee decided that it was unnecessary to have the figures read, as they would be included in the stenographic report, and they could read them at their leisure.

leisure.

The witness had concluded his computations upon the Philadelphia building, which showed the difference between the amounts paid by the Government to the contractors for dressing stone for the entire structure, and the actual cost of the work based upon a liberal estimate for labor. The total amount paid by the Government to the contractors was $$18,700. The cost to the contractors was $$18,700. The cost to the contractors was $$18,700. labor. The total amount paid by the Government to the contractors was $$18,700. The cost to the contractors, making a liberal allowance, if at least thirty per cent. for profit, was $443,700, leaving a balance of $375,000 unnecessarily paid by the Government. Mr. Stinemetz qualified his statement by stating that the basement and a portion of the second story having been commenced under the 15 per cent.contract system, were completed under the modified contract system, these per-tices, therefore, could not be included in his calculations; but, at a rough estimate, the difference in the two prices would add about $100,000 to his previous tables.

Chairman New suggested that the computations of the Philadelphia building be accepted as an example of the other buildings constructed under Mr. Hill's regime.

Mr. Coleman objected to the proposition and said the prosecution would show that the Government had lost $$2,000,000 by the letting of contracts by Hill if access could be had to all the papers.

During the discussion on this point Mr. Coleman said: "If the employes of Mr. Hill's office had worked as hard as we have

Mr. Thomas.—"They have been dragged here."

"Oh, no," replied Mr. Coleman; "they are piping off the investigation."

Mr. Coleman then asked that Mr. Hill be put upon the stand, but his counsel objected. The committee then adjourned until 10:30 to-morrow morning, when the cross-examination of Mr. Stinemetz will take place and Mr. Hill be called; upon to testify.

A Deserted Courtroom.

The courthouse to-day presented a remarkable contrast to yesterday and the days in the past six months. The crowds that gathered had disappeared, the trialroom was empty, and every place seemed deserted. The summer laxity has taken hold on the legal business, and there is little being done. The Star-Route trial was the attraction at the City Hall, and that being ended the magnet is gone.

This morning a few of the friends of the defendants came up to Walsh's, but finding them not, departed, and the street that was alive with people and excitement yesterday is duil, quiet and sleepy to-day.

The report that Mrs. Nickerson, the wife of Major Nickerson, is in the city with a view of making application for a portion of her husband's pay pending the decision of his status in the Army lacks foundation, as Secretary Lincoln stated to a reporter of The Chirtic this morning that no application of the kind has been received by him. Ex-Senator's Dorsey last evening, while in conversation with a party of friends, in answer to a question as to whether or not be purposed to pay his respects to the newspapers that had been maligning him, said: "If God gives me strength and I have money enough I intend to go for them, especially the New York Times."

YOUNG NUTT'S CASE.

Sentiment in His Favor-Distinguished Counsel employed
FITTSEURG, FA., June 15.—The general sentiment in Uniontown is that young Nutt will be acquitted. He will, in all likelihood, be tried at the September term of the court. The question of counsel has been discussed and to some extont settled.

Hon. Edgar Cowan, of Greensburg, will be one of the coursel for the detense and Thomas St. Marchall, of Fittsburg, will likely be another.

one of the counsel for the defense and Thomas
M. Marshall, of Pittsburg, will likely be another.

In conversation with a young gentleman friend of Miss Lizzis Nutt this moraing, a young man engaged in one of the mercantile establishments of this town, and who occupied the position of a condent of Miss Nutt, the correspondent was told that she had several times talked with him about what she had better do, and asked his advice as to whether she had best kill Dukes or not.

He asked her if she thought she had the nerve to carry out her design.
She thought she had, but was atraid she might not succeed in killing him.

He told her that she could not undertake it tuless she felt sure she could raccood.
She replied that was the only reason why
she had not before attempted it.

This conversation was held one day when she had encountered Dukes on the street by accident, almost running against him.

She was very much agitated when she came into the store where the young man in question was employed and was unable to stand.

Several times afterward she had conversed with him on the subject, showing plainly that the question was appermost in her mind. Dukes' funeral will take place to-merrow at 11 a.m.

The following telegram was, to-day, received by Secretary Teller:

SAN CARLOS, A. T., June 14, 1883,

A large number of leading Indians met in council to-day. They sent for me and earnestiy protested against the return of the Chrischua meu and boys. They say trouble is sure to follow such a course. They want the chiefs and head men punished and the other men sent where they cannot return. They do not object to the women and children coming here. They ask me to make knewn their views to you and General Cook, and urge their objection. All of the bands unite in this request.

jection. All of the banes unite in this request.

They say they desire to remain at peace with their white neighbors, but that the Chiricahuna will return to the warpath as soon as they grow strong again and the reservation indians will then be charged with having aided and encouraged them. Assuring them of my confidence in the wisdom of the authorities who would have to decide the matter, if promised them to present their pestition as evidence of the justness of their position.

Willows, Agent.

Secretary Teller telegraphed Wilcox not to receive either the men or women, but only the children.

Pittsburg is better known for its riots, dirt

Pittsburg is better known for its riots, dirt and grimy commerce than for its judicial examples, but a judge in the Court of Commen Pleas has rendered the country a solvice in a decision that will be accepted genorally as a sound precedent. A man named Gardner brought suit against the Pullman Palace Car Company for the value of property lest while a passenger in one of the company's cars. His watch and purse were taken while he slept. The counsel for plaintiff took the ground that the company was responsible as ballee. The dafense entered the plea that valuables should be put in the safe provided for that purpose. The point was made that as the cars are now arranged a professional thief could reach through from one birth to rob a sleeper in another. The Court held that when the company sold a ticket for $2 in addition to the regular rates of passage, and offered the facilities of sleeping as an inducement to pay the extra monery, it bound itself to protect its patrons while they were asleep and for the time being helpiless. A verdict was rendered for the full amount of the claim. If the decision is sustained in the Supreme Court, to which the case has been appended, the car company will have its hands full attending to similar suits. This may lead to an improvement in sleeping-car construction.

Louise Michel.

Louise Michel.

Louise Michel, the French revolutionist, is believed by many to be a victim to remorse for the death of her husband, of which she was the Indirect cause. Her maiden name was victoire Guerier, and she is now 49 years old. In early life she was a school-teacher, and while holding that position was married to one M. Tinnyre. By him ashe had three sons, of whom two are now living. They are orgravers, and execute all the vignottes on their mether's pumphlets. M. Thayre was a kind-nearted, easy-going man, and he and his wife were devotedly attached to each other. Through her, however, the was led into the Commune, and met his death. Since then she has been animated by two passions only—comore and revenge.

GUNNING FOR A SEDUCER.

GUNNING FOR A SEDUCER.

Almost a Tragedy in a South Carolina Town.

GREENVILLE, S.C., June 15.—For some days past a rumor has been in circulation here to the effect that a Miss Kay, the daughter of a constable, has been embryoned by L. W. Floyd, a wealthy young man, doing business here. The story at length reached the cars of Mr. Kay, the girl's father, and he proceeded to investigate it. Miss Kay dhaily contessed that Floyd and drugged and assaulted her and had subsequently kept up an improper intimacy. Yesterday morning Mr. Kay called at Floyd's office and asked Floyd if he proposed to marry his daughter. Floyd promptly replied in the negative, whereupon Mr. Eay reached for his revolver. While in the act of taking out the weapon Floyd fired at him but missed. Several shots were exchanged, when triends interfered and the affair ended, Floyd was dangerously wounded by a builet in the left side. The affair creates much excitement.

The Bace for the Childs Cup.

The Lace for the Childs Cup.

PHILADELPHA, June 15.—The annual race for the Childs Cup takes place this afternoon. Up to yesterday it was understood that the Columbia Club would enter the race, which is now between a Princeton and a University rew. The University men feel quite sore over the action of the Columbia. Rooms had been engaged for them at the Collonade Hotel, and everything arranged for their reception. Some of the University men do not hesitate to say the Columbia withdrew because they were afraid they would be beaten at the eleventh hour. The notification of the Columbia's withdrawal is unfavorably commented upon on all sides.

Denouncing Dynamite Warfare.

DUBLIN, June 15.—The Freeman's Journal, in its issue to-day, referring to the conviction and sentence of Dr. Gallagher, Wilson, Whitehead and Curtin, the Loudon dynamite conspirators, says: "The miscreants got what they richly deserved, and we hope that all others caught in the same diabolical business will meet with the same treatment." The Journal further says "that such a mode of warfare as it is evident these men intended carrying out, blowing up houses, etc., can do no cause, no matter hw just, any good, and only tends to bring odlum on the people and nation in whose cause such acts are claimed to be committed."

Kerr, the Chicago Forger.

New York, June 15.—Pinkerton's Detective Agency has received a dispatch to the effect that F. M. Kerr, the Chicago forger, who was arrested at Lima, Feru, by their officers, and whose extradition cost them so much trouble, in consequence of ignorance of the State Department in not knowing that an extradition treaty existed between this country and Feru, left Lima yearerday on board the United States steamer Essex for New York, in charge of the man who made the arrest.
